Election Ethics

NOTE: This is general information. Each situation is different. Please contact the legal office for more information about your particular situation

During the election cycle all DoD personnel—military and civilian—should be aware of the various limitations that exist when it comes to participation in political activity as well as DoD support to political campaigns.

For active duty personnel, the general rule is that a member may not participate in “partisan political activities.” When it comes to fundraisers, rallies, and conventions, that rule prohibits pretty much anything but mere attendance. Of course, members should not attend in uniform.

Service members must also be careful not to comment, post, or link to material that violated the UCMJ or Service regulations. Examples include showing contempt for public officials, releasing sensitive information or posting unprofessional material that is prejudicial to good order and discipline.

Finally, members are permitted to display appropriate bumper stickers, but large partisan political signs are not allowed. Material on a bumper sticker or in a social media post that violates the Uniform Code of Military Justice or service regulation is still subject to disciplinary action. That means steer clear of messages that show contempt for public officials, release sensitive information, or contain unprofessional material or material prejudicial to good order and discipline.

The above summary is not exhaustive. There is an entire Department of Defense directive on this subject, so be mindful of political activities and check with your local legal office when in doubt.

For DOD civilian employees, political activities are regulated by a number of sources including a federal law called the Hatch Act.

DOD civilian employees, except Further Restricted Employees, are allowed to volunteer with a political campaign or political organization while in their personal capacities. These employees are however, prohibited from soliciting or receiving political contributions.

As with many restrictions on use of the federal workplace, federal employees may never engage in political activities while on duty or in a federal building. This means that employees may not send or forward political emails or post political messages to social media while in a federal building (including when off duty), even if the employee is using his or her personal smart phone, tablet or computer. Further guidance can be obtained from local legal offices.
